FIND NEW TUCKER PIN WITNESS

Saunders Says Fact of Birth Proves Tucker Diary False

I hope you all will enjoy your trip to New York. It is a fine place, I think. I have been there a great many times, and I was born right near there.—From Charles L. Tucker's "diary," as made public by the Rev. Dr. W. C. Winslow.

The fact is, as appears in full in the records of births for the year 1881, in the office of the Registry Department of Boston, that Charles L. Tucker, son of Albert F. and Lucy A. Tucker, was born at No. 69 Camden street, Boston, April 18, 1881.

Tucker knew very well where he was born, for in the license for his marriage on January 1, 1903, a record of which is in the office of the city clerk of Newton, is his sworn statement that he was born in Boston.—Statement of Former Representative Charles R. Saunders.

Head of Canadian stickpin used by Tucker defence for purpose of identification

Testimony of Amy Roberts, Which Went Far to Convict Prisoner, Contradicted by Miss Alice W. Hubbard---Pin Not Given to Mabel Page by Her Sister, Mrs. Freeman, She Says in Affidavit.

Mrs. Freeman, a sister of Mabel Page, for whose murder Charles Louis Tucker faces death in the week beginning June 10, in a public statement made to-day declares that she cannot remember that she ever gave Mabel the Canadian stickpin which figures so prominently in the trial of the young man.

This Canadian pin was considered the most vital piece of evidence in the possession of the State. It was found in Tucker's coat pocket, and was the only thing introduced by the prosecution to actually connect Tucker with the Page house on the day of the crime.

But one witness swore that the pin had been the property of Mabel Page. That was Amy Roberts, the maid in the Page home. She said that the pin was given to Mabel Page by her sister, Mrs. Freeman, and that the young woman frequently wore it.

Both of these statements of Amy Roberts were denied to-day, the former by Mrs. Freeman, and the latter by Miss Alice W. Hubbard of Weston, who was a close friend of Miss Page.

DENIED GIVING MABEL PIN.

Miss Hubbard, in an affidavit which is on file at the State House, declares that Mrs. Freeman stated to her positively many times that she did not give the Canadian pin to her sister Mabel.

Following is a part of the affidavit that Miss Hubbard made:

"During the Winter of 1904 and 1905, when the Tucker case was tried, I was boarding at Mrs. Freeman's house in Boston and she used to talk often about the trial, and seemed to enjoy the notoriety of it, and referring to the enamelled stickpin she stated to me many times and positively that she never gave it to her sister, and had never seen it in her sister's possession at any time.

"I remember that Mrs. Freeman was summoned by the defence to testify at the trial, but she sent a physician's certificate that she was not well enough. She later attended the trial."

KNEW MABEL MANY YEARS.

To a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN Miss Hubbard to-day said:

"I have known the Page family as long as I can remember. Our house on Chestnut street, Boston, was opposite the Page house and we were all brought up in the same neighborhood.

"I was the one in our family nearest the age of Mrs. Freeman and Mabel, and I was so intimate with Mabel that I considered that I was a confidential friend of hers.

"Of course Mrs. Freeman didn't authorize me to say anything about the Canadian pin, and I don't think she ever expected that I would tell what I knew about it, because if she did she probably would have been more careful about what she said.

"In reply to the statement by Mrs. Freeman that I was always putting in an appearance at her home whenever she had friends from Weston, I wish to say that I went there to board and always paid my board. I see that Mrs. Freeman says her sister never called me by my first name. I always called her Mabel and she always called me Alice, and after I had lived at Mrs. Freeman's awhile I called her (Mrs. Freeman) Annie.

"Mabel Page called on me after her mother died and she told me that it was the only call she had made on anybody since her mother had died."

SAYS DIARY IS FALSE.

Charles R. Saunders, a prominent lawyer and former chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners of this city, declared to-day that the diary of Charles Louis Tucker, written in his cell in the East Cambridge Jail, and purporting to give all of his movements on the day Mabel Page was murdered, is false.

In his diary Tucker tells of his walk toward the Page house on the day of the crime and declares that he turned back at Cutter's Corner, a third of a mile from the Page residence, and returned to his home. He did not mention the murder nor the name of the dead girl.

The diary was written at the request of Rev. Dr. William Copley Winslow, an Episcopal clergyman of Boston, and in a note to the minister Tucker said:

"I hope you all will enjoy your trip to New York. It is a fine place, I think. I have been there a great many times, and I was born right near there."

Mr. Saunders points out that Tucker did not tell the truth when he said he was born near New York, because the records show that he was born in Boston, and that Tucker knew it very well, as he gave Boston as his birthplace when he applied for his marriage license.

To a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN Mr. Saunders said:

"HEIGHT OF DECEPTION."

"Is not the height of deception reached when the letter of May 13, 1906, of Charles L. Tucker to Rev. Mr. Winslow, purporting to describe the movements of Tucker on the day of the murder of Mabel Page, and written more than two years thereafter to save himself from death, is described as Tucker's 'diary'?

"A diary is a record of daily events jotted down at the time of their occurrence or shortly thereafter, and is of value because it is a contemporaneous record, made up without thought of future happens, which cannot, of course, be foreseen. A statement of alleged events of a particular day two years ago, written by a man under sentence of death to save himself from impending doom, is the very opposite of a diary.

"How valuable this particular 'diary' is may be judged by an extract. In it Tucker says: 'I hope you all will enjoy your trip to New York. It is a fine place, I think. I have been there a great many times and I was born right near there.' The fact is, as appears in full in the record of births for the year 1881, in the office of the registry department of Boston, that Charles L. Tucker, son of Albert F. and Lucy A. Tucker, was born at 69 Camden street, Boston, April 18, 1881. Tucker knew very well where he was born, for in the license for his marriage on January 1, 1903, a record of which is in the office of the city clerk of Newton, is his sworn statement that he was born in Boston.

"Lies Told by Tucker."

When one recalls how Tucker lied to the officers, vigorously denying that he owned any such knife as they described, until the officers confronted him with the broken pieces; when one remembers that Tucker's counsel did not dare to have him take the stand at the trial and make these statements of his whereabouts on the day of the murder, subject to cross-examination as to their truth by the government, and when one now finds him lying thus in this last craven's appeal to be saved from the richly merited penalty of his crime, what folly to spend any further time perusing or discussing his utterances."

Three of the jurors who convicted Tucker signed the petition asking the Governor to commute his sentence to life imprisonment.

Great efforts are being made at this They are Ralph E. Whitcomb of Boxboro, William A. French of Sudbury and Thomas H. Murphy of North Chelmsford. In the light of the new evidence, if this jury should be allowed to pass on the case again there would probably be a disagreement. time to locate the missing Amy Roberts, the housekeeper for the Pages, whose testimony at the trial had great weight, and who, it is believed, can give more information in another line of questioning. Where she may be no one cares to make public.

Former Attorney-General Parker said yesterday that he knew and the police knew where Amy Roberts can be found. He refused absolutely, however, to give her address. He refused emphatically also to discuss, in any way, the many points which have been brought forward by Vahey, Innes & Mansfield, the Rev. Dr.

'Sport' Sullivan at State House Denies He

IS "THE TALL DARK MAN"

Ready to Tell Bribery Investigators That He "Knows Nothing" of Scandal.

Joseph J. ("Sport") Sullivan was at the State House at noon, waiting to go before the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives, which is hearing the charges made against that body in connection with the recent legislative scandals and bribery charges.

Through his attorney, who accompanied him, Sullivan said:

"I am not the 'tall, dark man' who attempted to bribe legislators. I have no relations with such a 'tall, dark man.' I know nothing about any bribery. I have nothing to tell the committee? I have not been summoned. I am here solely because I heard the committee might want me."

With information before them as to the identity of a 'medium height, dark man,' a member of the House, who attempted to bribe fellow members, and who said he had a list of fifty Representatives whom he intended to pay $50 each to vote against the anti-bucket shop bill, the committee of investigation now faces the duty of ascertaining who were the fifty.

Duty is Now Plain.

The securing of evidence against the one man who tried to bribe, and the two or three who admit they were approached, but refused his offer, has sunk into comparative insignificance in the face of the evidence given yesterday as to this purchase of a block of fifty men. Whether the star chamber committee, which so many men are saying is sitting to protect the bribed, even if they have to find a verdict against one or two bribers, will follow up this plain lead is not known. They seem still determined, in the face of the protest of all the people and nearly every paper of the State, in holding their inquiry in secret.

The one subject of conversation at the State House to-day was the sensational evidence given yesterday by Representative Jacob H. Mock of Ward 22, Boston, who gave the committee the name of the Representative who tried to bribe him and who told him of the fifty men that were to be paid to kill the bill.

It has been spoken of as coincident that Senator Logan, father of the anti-bucket shop bill, in stating that bribery had killed the measure, the day after its death, alleged that fifty-four members had been bought. The similarity in figures between the number the Senator said were bribed and th number Mr. Mock was told were to be bribed, is regarded as highly significant.

Mr. Mock, before the committee more than two hours yesterday, told them every detail of the attempt to buy his vote. He was severely cross-examined.

When the committee sat at noon to-day Joseph J. Sullivan went before it. He was accompanied in the anteroom by his attorney, Election Commissioner David B. Shaw, whose office is in the Tremont Building. He referred questioners to his counsel, and Mr. Shaw, speaking for Sullivan, answered the questions of a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

"Has Mr. Sullivan been summoned?" he was asked.

"He has not," said Mr. Shaw. "He heard the committee might want him and came here of his own accord. He will go before them if they wish him to."

"Is Mr. Sullivan the 'tall, dark man' who has been mentioned as attempting to purchase votes?"

"He is not."

Has "Nothing to Tell."

"Has he had any relations with such a man?"

"He has not. He does not know who the tall, dark man is."

"What will he tell the committee?"

"Nothing. He has nothing to tell. He does not know anything about any bribery or any other matter into which the committee is inquiring. He has come here merely because he has heard that his name has been connected with the matter, and he wishes to answer any questions they may want to ask him."

At its barn dance given in Copley Hall last night, Boston Council, Knights of Columbus, gave its best entertainment in the long series of successful social entertainments which has secured for it a high reputation. Not less than 1,200 persons, most of them in costume, were present. The hall was appropriately decorated, and the stage was fashioned to represent a barn.

J. H. Cullen and P. J. McCarthy, as constables, with the "Jaytown" band, led the grand march. Grand Knight Daniel P. Toomey and Miss Catherine T. Hughes, followed by about 150 couples, passed before the reviewing judges, Dr. T. Hanrahan, John B. Dore, Captain D. J. Gorman, W. M. Connell, Joseph Callahan and William Cummings.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 24.—The Board of Aldermen is determined to build the proposed municipal wharf for this city, and yesterday sent an order to City Attorney V. A. Bullard instructing him to notify the Rutland Railroad Company to remove its wharf.

The railroad wharf interferes with the construction of the municipal dock. The railroad refuses to vacate, and will carry the case to court, claiming ownership of the property.

PRISONERS DASH FOR FREEDOM; ESCAPE

EMMONS WILL RETURN TO HIS LAW PRACTICE

On his retirement from the Board of Police, of which he was the former chairman, on June 1, Commissioner W. H. H. Emmons will go back to his law practice.

Denying that he would be appointed to a deputy superintendency in the police department, Judge Emmons told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day that under no circumstances would he accept a position in the department.

"While I appreciate the good feeling and courtesy on the part of my associates who might have thought of such a move, I would not under any circumstances accept any place in the police department.

"I had not heard of the suggestion until it was called to my attention to-day. I am not a candidate for any place in the department. No circumstance can make me accept such a place even if tendered me.

"When I conclude my work with the board I will go back to my law practice."

PRINCESS ENA LEAVES LONDON TO BE MARRIED

Future Queen of Spain Cheered by Great Crowds at Victoria Station.

KING EDWARD IN ESCORT

LONDON, May 24.—Princess Ena of Battenberg left here to-day for Madrid, where her marriage to King Alfonso of Spain occurs next week.

All along the route from Kensington Palace to the Victoria station the future Queen was cordially saluted by people who were anxious to bid her farewell. The departure of the royal party, however, was made as quiet as possible and there was no crush at the station.

Princess Ena was accompanied by her mother, Princess Henry, and her brothers, Princes Maurice and Leopold, and the Marquis Villalobar, councillor of the Spanish Embassy.

Escorted by King Edward.

When they arrived at the station the royal family gathered in a special waiting room, where the farewells were said. A number of privileged ticket holders representing the aristocracy of Great Britain and the Spanish colony in London were at the station and presented the future Spanish Queen with beautiful bouquets, tied with the British and Spanish colors.

King Edward in person conducted Princess Ena to her saloon. Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales and members of the families of the Duke of Connaught and the Duke of Teck were also present.

When Queen Alexandra and Princess Ena said farewell to each other both burst into tears. The Princess soon recovered from the momentary attack of sadness at leaving England, however, and was bright and happy.

Loud Cheers by Crowd.

As the train pulled out of the station there were loud cheers from the assembled crowd while the British and Spanish subjects joined in cries of "Long live the Queen of Spain."

From London the wedding party will go to Dover and thence to Calais. The overland trip toward Madrid will be made in a special train.

NEW BUREAU TO PICK LABORERS FOR CITY WORK

Only Those Registered at Democratic City Committee Can Obtain Jobs.

CARDS GIVEN ELIGIBLE

An employment catalogue of city laborers has been established at the headquarters of the Democratic City Committee. It is planned to have every laborer employed, either by the city or by contractors on city work, registered at the employment bureau and furnished with a card signed by either President William F. McClellan or John J. Gallagher, in charge of the headquarters at No. 220 Washington street.

Hereafter contractors who are awarded city work will be expected to have in their employ only men who are registered at the bureau. The contractors will be furnished with a list of the men available for employment.

The registering of men already employed by the city has begun. Sample cards have been furnished to inspectors who are in a position to follow the work done by the city, and they have been instructed to see that the contractors live up to the orders of the city committee.

The registration of laborers, it is said, will extend to the employes of the sewer department who have been laid off because the Aldermen failed to pass the million dollar loan order desired by Mayor Fitzgerald. When work is resumed each of these laborers who wants to go back to work will be expected to have a city committee employment card.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24.—Before the Senate committee on finance yesterday, Secretary Taft urged that Congress give to the Panama canal commission authority to purchase two steel dredges in the foreign market, and to purchase abroad other supplies when it is found that domestic prices are extortionate. CAFE PATRONS CHANGED INTO WEDDING GUESTS

MRS JOHN H MACKAY

BRIDE IN A CAFE WEDDING RECEPTION.

Novel Way in Which a Lynn Couple in a Public Restaurant Celebrate Their Marriage.

LYNN, May 24.—A wedding reception in a public restaurant, where every customer who happened in was immediately made a guest and a partaker of the marriage feast, was the novel way in which John H. McKay and pretty Ellen M. Courtnell celebrated their nuptials in this city.

The couple were married by Rev. Edward Tillotson, rector of the Church of Holy Name, in Swampscott, at his rectory in the Blaney House, built 157 years ago, on Humphrey street.

Following the wedding the couple with a few relatives who witnessed the ceremony, were driven to Lynn and took possession of the restaurant, where over 100 guests had been bidden to attend the supper and reception.

When birde and groom arrived at the cafe they were confronted by their friends and after showers of rice had been thrown at them, not to forget old shoes and the usual accompaniments of a romantic wedding, the guests lined the long tables.

A special menu was not in order, and the guests called for a plate of beans or broiled live lobster, or anything else they wanted. Customers who entered in quest of coffee and a ham sandwich were given seats at the tables among the guests and the waiters instructed not to punch meal tickets.

Following the unique marriage supper each guest of the restaurant was supplied with a piece of the mammoth wedding cake.

RAISE PAY IF SHOE MACHINE TRUST LOSES

Big Manufacturing Company Will Give Increase if Bill Passes.

THE "LEASES OPPRESSIVE"

If the bill giving the shoe manufacturers relief from the oppressive leases of the Shoe Machinery Trust becomes a law, the R. H. Long Shoe Manufacturing Company of South Framingham will increase the wages paid their employes ten per cent.

Such is the answer made by that concern to the statements of Machinery Trust. The Trust has been telling the members of the Senate, through agents and letters, that to pass the anti-leasing bill would be to strike a hard blow at the large shoe manufacturers.

The Long company employes over 1,000 hands and operates 200 stores throughout the country. To-morrow the bill comes before the Senate and the machinery trust is working desperately to defeat it. During the debate Senator Schofield will read the following answer of the Long company to the statements of the Trust:

"After careful consideration we believe the bill now before the Senate regarding the leasing of machinery will, if passed, be of great benefit to the shoe manufacturing industry, including the manufacturers and their employes. We have told our employes if the bill passes we will be allowed to use machinery in competition with the machines now supplied by the Trust and we will be able to save such large amounts now paid in royalties that we will grant an increase of 10 per cent. in wages of all our employes."

TSCHAIKOWSKY NIGHT AT "POPS"

Of modern composers, the one who stands next to Wagner in popular esteem is without doubt Tschaikowsky, and the announcement that Mr. Adamowski would make this evening at the "Pops" a "Tschaikowsky Night" has been received with much favor. Tschaikowsky wrote not only tragic music, but also a quantity of fascinating dance music that was used in his operas and ballets, and this is little known. Out of the twelve numbers on the program five will be by the Russian.

$307,000 COAL STOCK FREE TO RAILROAD MAN

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—Further revelations concerning stock holdings in soft coal mining companies by officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad were made yesterday when the Interstate Commerce Commission resumed its investigation into the alleged discrimination by railroads in the distribution of cars.

Three high officials of the railroad, First Vice-President John P. Green, Third Vice-President Samuel Rea and William A. Patton, assistant to the president at Philadelphia, were the important witnesses of the day. The persistent questioning of Attorney Glasgow for the commission brought out the fact that Mr. Patton had acquired stock, the par value of which is $307,000, in various coal companies, without cost to himself. He explained, however, that he had signed notes obligating himself for his share of the losses and declared his belief that it was proper for him to accept the stock under those conditions.

Vice-President Rea read a statement to the commission in which he explained all of his stock transactions, stating that he did not believe he was debarred from such ownership because of his connection with the railroad company. Mr. Rea said that most of his stock was acquired through his associations with land purchasing syndicates, which took up the coal properties for development.

Vice-President Green said that twenty or thirty years ago it was not considered improper for an official of the railroad to own coal company stock, but that conditions had changed and such holdings might not now be regarded in the same light as formerly. He informed the commission that the board of directors of the Pennsylvania railroad had appointed a committee of five directors to make an investigation into the connection of its officials with coal companies. Mr. Green said he did not own a dollar's worth of coal company stock.

Other witnesses testified to stock ownership and discrimination in the distribution of cars.

Chairman Knapp, former Senator Cockrell and Judson C. Clements conducted the hearing. Mr. Clements left afterward for Cleveland, where he will join Commissioner Prouty to conduct the hearings in the of investigation beginning to-day.

U. S COURT CALLS ACTS OF TRUESDALE THEFT

Conduct like Truesdale's by those who manage the affairs of great corporations has roused the spirit of resentment in the public mind, which is so intense to-day, and which is not unlikely to result in litigation and municipal interference which will bring serious loss upon the stockholders.

His methods are morally no better than larceny.

He has exhibited an arrogance, born of scorn of the consequences of his action.—From U. S. Court decision in a milk freight case.

STRIKE-BREAKERS IN LYNN SAVED FROM MOB

LYNN, May 24.—Under guard of private detectives, the band of strikebreakers brought to Lynn to take the places of the striking employes of the machinery manufacturing shops early to-day left their boarding place at No. 25 Buffum street, where last night they were surrounded by a mob of men and women sympathizers with the striking machinists. No trouble occurred to-day. The men were allowed to go to their work unmolested.

Crowd Gathers Early.

Over five hundred persons were in the crowd which surrounded the headquarters of the professional strikebreakers last night. The crowd began gathering about 7 o'clock. Twenty-nine strikebreakers and twelve detectives, all armed, were inside the building. When any one of them was sighted by the crowd outside he was greeted with hoots and jeers. Finally, the police reserves were called out. Headed by Chief of Police Thomas M. Burkes and a number of private detectives, the crowd was dispersed.

Meetings of various labor unions were held later in the night, and at all of them, the City Government, the Mayor and the Chief of Police, were condemned for allowing the strikebreakers to hold forth here. The union leaders are opposed to demonstrations like that of last night, and are warning union men not to take part in them.

To Confer with Mayor.

The strike of the machinists employed in the shoe machinery manufacturing establishments began on May 1. The men are asking for a closed shop, a nine-hour day, and a half holiday on Saturday.

The employers, all of whom are members of the National Metal Trades Association, asked the national body for help. Secretary Tougy of the association came on last Sunday with the strikebreakers.

A committee of men representing the union will wait upon Mayor Barney to-day to demand an explanation of last night's trouble, and ask why private detectives were permitted to deny to citizens the right to stand on the sidewalk, as it is claimed was done last night at No. 25 Buffum street.

TUCKER'S DIARY FALSE, DECLARES SAUNDERS

PROVEN BY RECORD OF HIS BIRTH

Wrote Dr. Winslow He Was Born Near New York; Books Show Boston.

MARRIAGE LICENSE ALSO

Winslow, Mrs. Alice Freeman, who is a sister of the murdered girl; Thomas Flynn and others.

Dr. Winslow wrote a note, yesterday, to Miss Alice Wells of No. 8 Elmwood street, Cambridge, in which he asked her in the name of justice to reveal the whereabouts of Miss Roberts. Miss Wells was last night asked for the address of her missing friend. She replied that she did not wish to make it known, and that in due time she would reply to the letter of Dr. Winslow.

BOY'S FAITH IS COURAGE OF HIS HOPEFUL MOTHER

By Eleanor Ames.

THERE was a sparkle in Mrs. Tucker's eyes and a bright spot of color burned in each cheek as she came out of the East Cambridge jail yesterday, after her regular Wednesday visit to her son.

"I have a message from Louis for the BOSTON AMERICAN," she said, "he asked me to tell everyone he is sure things are coming out favorably for him. He is very much more hopeful. He is grateful to every one who is helping him to establish the truth, for that would mean his innocence."

James H. Vahey, Tucker's devoted counsel, visited him early yesterday and had a long and earnest talk with him. While he did not give him details of the new evidence which, it is believed, will have so important a bearing on the case, he told him enough news to make Tucker's face grow more cheerful and bring a hearty smile to the lips which have lately had a drawn expression.

MOTHER AND SISTER CALL.

Shortly after Mr. Vahey left, his mother and her sister, Mrs. Harley, called. Each had a box of fruit and home-made goodies. Tucker greeted them cheerfully and affectionately.

They told me that he looks much better than he did a week ago and that he is more cheerful than they have seen him in a long time.

"Of course he is very anxious," said his mother, "but the excitement is keeping him up a good deal."

Tucker is very anxious to see Dr. William Copley Winslow, to whom he has written a complete account of his doings on the day of the murder.

Dr. Winslow tried to see him before he went to New York, but was unable to do so.

TALKS WITH MINISTER.

Sheriff Fairbairn, however, gave Tucker permission to see the Rev. Mr. Bishop of Auburndale, a friend of the family and who officiated last fall at the marriage of Tucker's younger brother, Walter.

Just before Mrs. Tucker arose to leave him yesterday, Louis looked up at her and taking her hands in his said earnestly:

"Mamma, I don't want you to feel any more discouraged than I am. I am feeling hopeful and I want you to. You must not cry. You must try to smile.

"Tell papa not to give up, but to brace up and be as brave as he can. I think he looked pretty well when I saw him Sunday. You and he must try to be brave, for I am sure things will come out all right."

"I told him each day that passed made the time grow shorter," said his mother, as with tear-dimmed eyes she told of her son's efforts to cheer her.

"Yes, that is so," he said, "but a great deal may be done in a day, and so much is being done for me."

I have heard Charles Louis Tucker called harsh names. I have heard him described as a "hardened wretch," a brute."

Do terms like those seem compatible with that simple message of love and courage, given to his mother when she left him in jail?

FRIENDS SHOW SYMPATHY.

The army of sympathizers who have allied themselves with Mrs. Tucker in her loyal belief in her son's innocence grows constantly. Not a day passes but some one calls at the Tucker home in Auburndale to give Mrs. Tucker a word of sympathy.

"My morning's mail brought me ten letters to-day," said Mrs. Tucker, as she spoke of the comfort she had received from friends.

"I have had over 2,000 letters since the trial begun. And they are such splendid letters! Every one of them expresses the belief that Louis is innocent and hopes for the best."

Florence Andrews, the young Somerville girl, who has taken such an interest in the case, was one of those who wrote Mrs. Tucker yesterday.

She is now in Nova Scotia with her mother. She wrote that before leaving Boston she went again to see Harold Page and received from him the absolute statement that he would go to see Tucker.

A strange face seen at Page window—not Tucker's, not Edward Page's—whose was it?

CHAS. L TUCKER

TERRANOVA GIRL INSANE, SAY EXPERTS

NEW YORK, May 24.—That Josephine Terranova, on trial for her life for the killing of her aunt, Concetta Reggio, at the time when she also slew her uncle, Gaetano Reggio, is so afflicted that she displayed no sensation whatever when burning matches were applied to her until her skin shrivelled and when pins were stuck into her side, is the testimony with which the defence concludes its case to-day.

Ex-Judge Palmieri, counsel for the girl, called to the stand Professor Graeme Hammond, professor at the Post Graduate College and a noted writer and alienist on nervous and mental diseases, to establish these facts.

Professor Hammond made a thorough examination of Josephine several days ago finding that she suffered from hemi-anaesthesia on the entire right side. He closed her eyes and applied matches to the side affected, burning off the skin, but the girl did not move or show the slightest discomfiture.

Pricked with pins, she did not wince.

When the covering was removed from her eyes Dr. Hammond asked the girl what had happened to her. She replied:

"Nothing. I felt nothing at all."

The purpose of the defence in showing conclusively that Josephine Terranova is a sufferer from hemi-anaesthesia is to strengthen its contention that she is afflicted with adolescent insanity, of which hemi-anaesthesia is one of the most pronounced symptoms.

With assurance that the girl will be acquitted of the murder charges against her, her lawyer now faces what he believes to be a new peril for his client, that is the insane asylum. The jury can find her not guilty on the ground of insanity which means that she must go to an asylum or it can return a verdict simply of not guilty.

F. A. KENNEDY A DIRECTOR

NEW YORK, May 24.—Frank A. Kennedy has been elected a director of the National Biscuit Company. His election introduces a new element into the directory of the company, and restores to active participation in the biscuit business one of the pioneers of the industry.

No name is more widely known throughout the United States in the biscuit business than that of Kennedy, and in all New England, where the Kennedy business had its origin and its home, the name is practically a household word. Mr. Kennedy for many years conducted successfully in Cambridgeport, Mass., the extensive business originally established in Chicago an and afterwards established in Chicago an equally important and successful manufacturing plant. His business at both points was purchased in 1890 by the New York Biscuit Company, since when Mr. Kennedy has been practically retired from direct connection with the conduct of its affairs.

MY FATHER ALWAYS HELD TUCKER GUILTY

—MRS. FREEMAN, SISTER OF MABEL PAGE.

Mrs. H. V. Freeman, sister of Mabel Page, in a long and detailed statement about the murder and her father's death, declares that Edward Page was fully convinced that Charles Louis Tucker was guilty of the crime for which he was condemned to death.

Mrs. Freeman declares that friends of Tucker annoyed her father so much that they hastened his death. She scores the Rev. William Copley Winslow for his activity in the case, and asserts that she does not remember whether she gave her sister a stickpin or not. This is Mrs. Freeman's statement:

"I have made no statement to anyone. I have never before this authorized anyone to make any statement in my behalf. I have never authorized anyone to state what I have said or might have to say about the case, about the stickpin.

"All I have to say about that stickpin is what I said to Attorney-General Parker and to all who had a right to know. I did not say that I did not give my sister a Canadian stickpin. I have said what I say now; I may have given it to her, but I do not remember."

Denounces Dr. Winslow.

Mrs. Freeman then discussed the assertions which have been made by Rev. William Copley Winslow that Edward Page was surprised at the verdict of guilty, did not expect such a verdict, and had during a conversation given Mr. Winslow secrets which the clergyman did not feel at liberty to disclose.

"The truth is that Mr. Winslow has no secrets of my father's. The public knows all my father knew of the murder of my sister, for on the witness stand he told everything he knew. He carried no secrets to the grave; he concealed nothing.

"Mr. Winslow, who has been most persistent in the misrepresentation of my father, has attacked his memory under the guise of an old friend. He has spoken of my father always as his 'old friend.'

"Let me tell you how much of a friend Mr. Winslow was of my father. In August, 1880, my father met Mr. Winslow on the steamer on a European trip. My father and I went abroad and I remained there some time.

"On the steamer, when my father was alone, he met Mr. Winslow as one man meets another on ship board. He formed an acquaintance with him.

"Afterward whenever they met on the street my father would ask him to come out to see him, just as any man would invite an acquaintance. But Mr. Winslow never came. I have heard my father say that Mr. Winslow acted as if he did not care to know him.

Barred Him from Funeral.

"The only time during the nearly twenty-six years of their acquaintance that Mr. Winslow came to my father's house was in November, 1904, nearly two months before the trial. Whatever conversation Mr. Winslow had with my father was on that occasion. There never was another interview, and if Mr. Winslow says my father discussed with him the verdict he cannot be speaking the truth, for my father never saw Mr. Winslow after the trial.

"When my father died we were afraid Mr. Winslow would come to the funeral, so we wrote him a note asking him to stay away.

"[illegible] experience with Mr. Winslow in February, 1905, about a month after Tucker had been found guilty. I remember the day very well. On February 22 my maid told me he had called the previous evening.

"That day my maid told me when he came that a 'neighbor' was downstairs. I remember well when I went down what he said. It was: 'Though personally unknown to you, I am an old friend of your father and a connection of your husband's.'

"He was not a connection of my husband's, but Mr. Freeman was very distantly related to his wife.

"Mr. Winslow said: 'I felt that I must give you my sympathy.' I received him as nicely as I could, for, of course, I did not anticipate the motive of his call.

"After awhile he began to talk about the death of my sister and the conviction of Tucker. He asked me a great many questions about Amy Roberts, the maid at my father's home. He asked me if I knew anything about her past, and I said of course, I had known her for years.

"A Cowardly Thing to Do."

"He asked me many impertinent questions about Amy, and he was so persistent that I was on my guard. He was making the cruellest insinuations against Amy Roberts's life and character.

"Finally I became indignant and I asked him: 'Why do you say this to me?'

"'Because I do not want to see an innocent man suffer,' he answered.

"'He is not innocent. He is guilty,' I said.

"Then he began to talk about Mr. Parker, saying that he had talked to the jury so long and so insistently that he made its members agree with him, that he had made the jury convict Tucker.

"I told Mr. Winslow that I would not listen to anything he had to say about Mr. Parker, for I had the greatest respect and highest esteem for him.

"I believe he did question me about the Canadian stickpin while he was talking about Amy. I told him that while I might have given my sister the stickpin I did not remember.

"I was alone in the house and unprotected, and Mr. Winslow is an old man. I was so angry that had Mr. Winslow been a young man, had he been of my own age or younger I would have felt compelled to take him by the collar and eject him from my house. Never have I been so insulted as I was by Mr. Winslow that day.

"I was so exercised by his visit that the next time I saw my father I told him of it. My father was indignant, and told me he did not like Winslow.

"I remember well my father saying—he was not very well at that time—what a cowardly thing it was to do.

"Had Greatest Contempt for Him."

"'I wish I had the strength to go to Boston and tell that man what I think of him for talking as he did to you,' my old father said. 'It was a cowardly thing to do. No one but a coward would have gone to the home of a defenceless woman, and, knowing she had no protector, would have talked to her as he did to you.'

"After that my father had the greatest contempt for Mr. Winslow.

"My father could not have said anything which could possibly give anyone the impression that he did not believe Tucker guilty. My father was sure he was guilty, never had the slightest doubt of it.

"The only fear he ever had was the fear that others had, the fear that the jury might not agree. When the verdict was returned my father was glad because he felt justice had been done.

"Why, I have heard my father say: 'Tucker is absolutely guilty beyond a doubt.'

"No one could have been more positive of it than my father. He told me to tell Mr. Parker how splendidly the condemnation had been secured.

"My father was not a vindictive man. He would not have said a word to injure a soul. He was the soul of honor, and though he believed Tucker guilty he would not say anything against him, except what he knew was absolutely true.

Believed Tucker Guilty.

"But my father felt that Tucker had a fair trial. He believed that everything in favor of the man that could be found was given to the jury. He was satisfied that every opportunity had been given to him, and when the verdict was rendered my father felt that Tucker had been justly found guilty upon the evidence.

"Let me repeat what I have heard my father say when he was ill during the last few months of his life: 'Tucker is to blame for my condition.'

"Tucker was to blame, Tucker and those who are trying to save him. My beloved father would be alive to-day if it had not been for them.

"I say it without any feeling of vindictiveness, I am perfectly composed, I am conscious of just what it means, and I say it because I know it is true—the people who are interested in saving Tucker killed my father. Now they would smirch the memory of that good man.

"You do not know how they persecuted my father, you cannot realize, as we did, how they tortured him. I am a woman, and I appreciate refinement, but there is only one word I can use to describe the actions of Mr. Winslow and those who are with him—their torture of my father was damnable.

"My sister's death was a great shock to my father. The months before the trial and the trial itself put a great strain upon him. But this did not break him down.

"My father was a good man and he loved his children. He loved my dear sister, and when he went through the ordeal of that trial he did only what he thought was his duty to his child, to the memory of his dear daughter.

Strangers Forced Way In.

"He bore it all patiently. He endured the publicity, all the annoyances and did his duty to his daughter and to the community. He told all he knew, concealed nothing.

"When the trial was over my father thought, and we all did, that we would be left alone in our sorrow. We had given the public all it wished to know about us, and all we wanted was a chance to enjoy the seclusion and peace which had been ours up to the day Tucker killed my dear sister.

"But they would not give us that. They would not let us alone. Strangers came to our house, walked about the house and peered into the windows. Mr. Winslow has been seen walking on the grounds making measurements.

"But they did not stop with that impertinence. They came to the door, made inquiries and some of them pushed their way into the house, insisting upon seeing my father.

"All this was cruel torture to my father and even his stout heart could not stand such a continuous strain.

"You know the last few months of my father's life he was so ill that he had to remain in a chair. His physician had forbade any one to see him who might possibly agitate him.

"Yet persons, strangers, would push their way into the house and start questioning the defenceless, feeble man about my sister's death and what he knew of it. Amy Roberts was the only other person in the house during the day and she could not stop them.

We Can Defend Ourselves."

"One day, when my father was very weak, a man forced his way into the house and thrust a petition in his face, asking him to sign it. It was a petition to the Governor for the commutation of Tucker's sentence. When I heard that I asked myself if there was any kindness, any sense of justice, any mercy left in the world.

"I have told you only a small part of the cruel torture they inflicted upon my father, have only shown by a few incidents how they drove him to the grave, but you can see the justice of the charge that they killed him.

"Mr. Winslow or anyone else can say what they please about me or my brother, Harold. We are alive and can defend ourselves. Let Mr. Winslow, let the men and women who are defending the murderer of my dear sister, assail us. We will bear any abuse they please to heap upon us, but we have a right to expect that they will respect the memory of an honorable, pure-minded man, a man whom they did not dare to attack while he was alive."

5 REPRESENTATIVES AND OTHERS SIGN TUCKER PETITION

The following members of the Massachusetts Legislature yesterday signed the petition asking Governor Guild to commute Charles L. Tucker's sentence to life imprisonment: Representatives, Thomas J. Grady, Ward 6; Theodore J. Glynn, Ward 17; John J. Butler, Ward 18; John J. Conway, Ward 23; James F. McDermott, Ward 7. Henry C. O'Brien, son of ex-Mayor O'Brien, was also one of the signers, and "Andy" Highlands, the old Harvard baseball pitcher, and Attorney A. E. Burr added their names.

GIRL STENOGRAPHER TRIED TO KILL SELF

The well-dressed young woman who attempted to commit suicide last night by jumping into the Charles River in Cambridge was to-day identified as Miss Eva Frances Smith, twenty-one years, a stenographer who worked in the office of Attorney Arthur H. Fitz, No. 1,033 Kimball building, Tremont street.

Attorney Fitz, at the Cambridge Street Police Station, at once identified Miss Smith. He says she lives with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Roth, of No. 5 Holliday street, Dorchester. She came there about three months ago and since then, until Tuesday night, was regularly employed in Mr. Fitz's office.

"She was a bright and capable young woman and never showed the least tendency to insanity," said Mr. Fitz. "Of late she seemed to be troubled over something but that did not interfere with her work."

After identifying the young woman, whose case has been held under advisement by Judge Almy, Attorney Fitz left for the residence of the young woman. She is a Virginian by birth.

Mind Seems Affected.

Rambling talk by the girl, whose mind is apparently affected, made the police officers sure that she had worked in a lawyer's office and finally she mentioned the names of Attorney Fitz and Percy W. Carver.

Last night at 10.30 o'clock the young woman, who is refined and well educated, was found on the Charles River Parkway by Patrolman Thomas Real. She was endeavoring to scale the fence and leap into the river. Falling backward from the fence she was apparently dazed when the policeman spoke to her.

She admitted that she had tried to drown herself, but in answer to all other questions her replies were vague and rambling. In the opinion on Dr. Brosseau, who talked to her at the Harvard square police station, the girl is insane, probably temporarily affected.

During the night at Police Station No. 1, Cambridge, she tossed in her sleep and muttered to herself. She mentioned the names of Arthur H. Fitz and Percy W. Carver. Mr. Fitz and Mr. Carver both have offices in the Kimball Building on Tremont street.

Early to-day, when asked who she was, the young woman said: "I have it now. I think I am Margaret Frances Cowland. Hungry? I think I am hungry. Yes, I know I am hungry. I was hungry last night before I tried to jump over that horrid fence. I thought to myself, what is the use of eating if I am going to die? Yes, I know I am hungry."

MISS EMMA PILON, SUING FOR $15,000.

Emma Pilon, Pretty French Girl, Files Suit Against Rich Pittsfield Man for Breach of Promise.

PITTSFIELD, May 24.—Denying that he had ever jilted Miss Emma Pilon, a Waterbury, Ct., girl, that he might wed Louise Marie Carity, a pretty and dashing Parisian, Alfred Viger, a wealthy young man of No. 27 Adam street, is preparing to fight a breach of promise suit for $15,000.

Young Viger has but recently come into possession of his fortune. He has for several years been socially prominent in Pittsfield. By a lifetime of frugal living, the elder Viger, who was an employe of the Boston & Maine Railroad, accumulated money and so invested it that he became very wealthy. His son inherited all.

Three years ago Miss Polin came to Pittsfield and secure a position as a clerk in a dry goods store. Viger met her and as she was an attractive, independent-acting young woman, he was attracted to her and sought her company. They were together a great deal and were constantly seen at public entertainments.

It soon became the talk of Pittsfield that the young man was going to make the girl his wife. Viger on one occasion accompanied Miss Polin to Waterbury, where he is said to have visited her parents.

Then came the beautiful Parisian, Louise Marie Carity. She moved to Lanesboro, and during the Winter Viger met her. His attentions to Miss Polin, it is said, ceased almost instantly, and he became all devotion to Louise Carity.

Their engagement was announced and on January 16 last, Alfred Viger and Louise Marie Carity were married in Notre Dame Church in this city. At the same time Miss Polin returned to her home in Waterbury and at once brought suit against Viger.

No Evidence, Says Viger.

Viger, to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN, said to-day:

"I never offered marriage to Miss Polin, and at no time did I intend to make her my wife. We were very good friends and that was all.

"I enjoyed her company, but marriage with her was far from my thoughts. I think she thought a great deal of me, but I never encouraged more than a friendly feeling. I saw her before I became engaged and told her that I was to be married. I have no knowledge of what her declaration in the suit will be, for it will not be filed here until the first Monday in June. I am positive that she has not a vestige of evidence against me."

On the other hand, friends of Miss Polin say that there will be plenty of evidence presented in the case against Viger. They say that he promised her marriage at Waterbury, at her home, and was accepted there. He was constantly in her company, and everyone who knew them believed that they were engaged.

LIGHT BILLS 70 PER CENT. LESS BY CITY PLANT

That New England public service corporations have wrested $1,000,000 annually from the people in overcharges for electric light and power service was the declaration of President L. W. E. Kimball of the Boston Electrical Workers' Union last night before the joint committee of the Cambridge Common Council and Board of Aldermen investigating the advisability of municipal ownership of the electric light plant of that city.

President Kimball stated that the city of Cambridge could furnish electricity, for which 16 cents per kilowat hour is now being charged, at the rate of 5 cents, and still make a profit.

Although for three hours and a half the committee listened to arguments for municipal ownership, it was a noteworthy fact that no points whatever against it were submitted. The committee will take under consideration the testimony to which it has listened, and it is probable that President Kimball and others will be asked to submit detailed figures in support of their statements.

President Augustus Seaver of the Cambridge Municipal League was one of the speakers of the evening, and he was followed by representatives from the Boston and Cambridge electrical workers' unions, including A. M. Richards, Michael Collins, Harry M. Joll and G. S. McFarland, in addition to President Kimball. Sidney J. Monk of Cambridge also spoke.

NO AMNESTY WHILE BOMBS ARE FLYING

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—The government's official statement striving to justify its refusal to grant amnesty to all political offenders was given out last night. It says in part:

"It is impossible to avoid noticing a strong current of feeling against full amnesty in different classes of the people, who point out that political assassinations do not cease. News is daily telegraphed from the provinces of fresh murders or attempts to murder officials.

"In the presence of such an irreconcilable disposition on the part of the Terrorist societies, the government cannot expose peaceful, right-thinking people to danger. The government cannot refrain from bringing to justice Terrorists and bomb-throwers. It cannot deliver from punishment by judicial sentences people who have committed and still are committing such crimes.

"The full pardon of all who have been arrested by administrative order is a possibility, and it may also be possible to abolish by legislative order states of war, extraordinary defence, etc., and institute judicial prosecution in localities where the revolutionary movement displays itself. Judicial prosecution in those districts is impossible at present owing to the terrorizing and even assassinating of witnesses summoned to testify."

A dispatch from Kursk says that the soldiers of the Obayau regiment, who were to be dispatched into the country districts in anticipation of agrarian troubles, have refused to take ball cartridges with them.

THE GREAT AUTO CHASE

CHAPTER XL.

A Glimmer of Light.

BALLARA, the dancer, was intent upon the perusal of an account of a fire at a place in South Boston, called The Barns. She laid aside the newspaper, then picked it up and read the article over again. Briefly the account was:

"A disastrous fire occurred at The Barns, South Boston, yesterday, which resulted in the total destruction of No. 14, occupied by a Mrs. Hooker, who accounts for the blaze by the accidental upsetting of a kerosene lamp. An exciting incident was caused by the heroism of Joe Morgan, an Australian at present visiting Boston.

"While the fire was at its height it was learned that there was an invalid confined to his bed in a top room of the house. Despite the remonstrances of firemen and the cries of bystanders, Mr. Morgan plunged fearlessly into the burning building and succeeded in rescuing the invalid.

"Both the invalid, Edward West, and his heroic rescuer were severely burned. West was removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital."

Ballara threw the newspaper aside the second time and meditated over the account for a long while. Edward West! That was the name of the injured man, now in hospital. Yet she herself had seen the man whom she had been told was Edward West—or bore that name—in an automobile about the same time with Margaret Taylor.

She also asked herself what Joe Morgan, her father, was doing and could it be but a coincidence that he had rescued a man whom she had supposed stole "The Green Blaze?"

Her mind went back to Australia and the hate Joe Morgan, her father, bore for the man Leonard Simms. She wondered what must have been the mental attitude of Morgan when he came face to face with this man, the despoiler of her own life.

While the dancer sat silent, trying to solve this puzzle, a maid entered.

"A letter for you, madam."

With languid figure Ballara took the letter and broke the seal. The postmark on the letter was Chelsea, and the time stamp on it showed that it had been mailed only a few hours previously. She glanced over it to the signature, Margaret Taylor, then carefully read it several times. It was as follows:

"My dear friend: I feel that I cannot go farther on my journey without sending you an apology for my seeming rudeness in leaving you so abruptly. Do not think me ungrateful to you for all your kindness but think of me as one who is the victim of circumstances.

"I received a telegram from my fiance asking me to meet him in the South station. I went there and found that he was in serious trouble. All the man Davis, whom we saw at the hotel, said against him is perfectly true.

"I am now on my way to be married. I know I am sacrificing all prospects of future happiness, but it was the only way to save the man I really love from prison, and I therefore cannot feel any regret.

"You ask me to be your friend, and under brighter circumstances it would have been a joy to me to call you so. I shall always think of your kindness as a bright memory and I hope that sometimes you will cast a pleasant thought upon

"Your unhappy friend,

"Margaret Taylor."

The letter caused Ballara even a greater degree of astonishment. If the man whom she had known as Leonard Simms in Australia was Edward West and Margaret Taylor was on her way to become his wife, who was the man whom Joe Morgan had rescued from the fire?

Who? For a long time she mused over the strange entanglement of identity.

We've all kinds of clothes, that is, good kinds—Morse made.

CORNELL AND HARVARD CREWS READY FOR THEIR RACE TOMORROW

Both the Ithacan and Cambridge Eights Are Fit for Their Struggle on the Charles River To-morrow—Expert Pronounces the Visiting Oarsmen the Best Crew He Has Ever Seen.

Cornell and Harvard varsity eight-oared crews will meet to-morrow afternoon on the Charles River. Both crews are seemingly fit, and, while the Ithacans are the favorites, the Crimson boys expect to make a better showing than last year.

Judging by the way the crew worked out on the Charles river yesterday afternoon, when they appeared for the first time, the Cornell eight is the best that has ever represented the Ithacan university on the water. The Cornellians appear much faster than the boat which raced the Crimson last season.

Such a good rowing judge as E. C. Storrow, the old Harvard varsity oarsman and coach, after watching the boys from Cornell on the river, pronounced them the fastest lot of oarsmen that has come under his observation in some time, and one that will most likely triumph over the Crimson when they clash with the Ithacans to-morrow.

Storrow Praises Visitors.

"The men in the Cornell crew row smoother and better together than they did a year ago," said Storrow, "and it is one of the most finished crews that it has ever been my privilege to see. They are, in point of development, far ahead of the Harvard crew, but what they will show to-morrow in the way of endurance and what constitutes racing form I have not the slightest idea.

The Cornell boys went out on the river this morning for another spin. Every man on the crew is feeling in the pink of condition. The Ithacans do not think they will be beaten by the Harvard crew, but if they are defeated they will not take the defeat seriously, as their whole mind is centred on winning the regatta at Poughkeepsie.

CORNELL WON'T HAVE WALKOVER, SAYS WRAY

"I don't think that Cornell will have the walk-away in the race to-morrow that they had last year. Our fellows expect to give the Ithacans a hard race. More than that it is impossible to say."

This was the manner in which Coach Wray of the Harvard varsity eight characterized the chances of the Crimson oarsmen against the Cornell crew.

Wray has a very respectful opinion of the rowing ability of Cornell crews.

"Cornell always has a fast crew, and I take it for granted that this year will be no exception. I have not seen Courtney's men row this year. Last year I was especially struck by the ease and grace with which the big fellows in the boat handled themselves."

Yesterday afternoon the Crimson oarsmen went out for a short time, leaving the Newell boat house at 5 o'clock. The work done was very light, and will be lighter still to-day. All the men in the boat are in good condition with the exception of Phil Flint. Owing to the fluctuations of the Athletic Committee as to whether or not he was eligible to row against Cornell, Flint was out of the boat for five days, which has thrown him a bit off condition.

The race on Friday will be rowed down stream at about 2 o'clock. Preceding the big race of the day, the Stone's School eight will race the Cascadilla School eight from Ithaca. Another preliminary race will be the Carroll Cup race for singles. Any student in Harvard University may enter this race. Grand stand accommodations for 2,000 have been built near the finish on the Boston side.

CORNELL VARSITY OARSMEN WHO WILL ROW HARVARD TO-MORROW AND THEIR VETERAN COACH, CHARLES COURTNEY.

The Cornell varsity crew is made up as follows: Commodore E. T. Foote, stroke; W. F. Lee, No. 7; C. P. Cox, No. 6; L. W. Gavett, No. 5; J. P. Dods, No. 4; W. S. Stowell, No. 3; R. C. Barton, No. 2; W. S. Newman, bow, and W. G. Taylor, coxswain. These pictures were made by a Boston American photographer when the crew went out to practice on the Charles yesterday.

Held-back votes were released in several quarters and popular teachers went up in the lists of the European Tour Election yesterday.

In the Greater Boston Division Miss Katherine Y. Prescott went above Miss Violet Creber in the "European Tour" class. Miss Kate Roud passed Miss Madeline Driscoll among those just outside the tour list. Miss Frances P. Newcomb of Shaw School, Roxbury, who has gained steadily and consistently for days, yesterday advanced another point in the standing.

In Massachusetts, while most of the leading candidates rested, Miss Annie T. Mellen displaced Miss Margaret F. G. Lee in the "Shakespearian Tour" winning list.

In Rhode Island and Connecticut, Miss Grace L. B. Milligan went above Miss Gertrude L. Hall.

The standing remained unchanged in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

"Subscription parties" and "coupon shows" are being held all over New England for favorite candidates.

CANDIDATES AND THEIR STANDING

Following is the list of teachers having 100,000 votes or more in the European Tour Election, arranged to show which candidates stand in the position of winners of the forty prize foreign trips. Record is kept of the names and votes of all teachers still unlisted.

The winners of the $1,000 in cash will be the six teachers having the highest total vote, regardless of location. The winners of the $500 in cash "consolation awards" will be the ten teachers polling the highest total votes and failing to win tours.

Shakespeare in Open Air

Ben Greet has chosen "As You Like It," to open his short Shakespearian season in the open air upon the grounds of Mrs. John Lowell, Hammond street, Chestnut Hill, next week. That will be the comedy on Monday afternoon and will be followed by "The Tempest" on Monday evening and Tuesday afternoon. That will be a decided novelty, as it has not been acted here in years, and has never been played in the open air. The fourth and last performance will be of "Midsummer Night's Dream" on Tuesday evening. All these performances will be given for charity.

"Mayor of Tokio" Coming

Richard Carle will be found to be funnier than ever when "The Mayor of Tokio" reopens the Colonial Theatre on Monday, June 4, for its Summer season of comic opera. This is Mr. Carle's own work, which was so well liked here last Winter, and in it he will play the leading part, the American theatrical manager stranded with his troupe in far-away, quaint Japan.

CLOTHIERS MEET HERE, 1907.

CINCINNATI, May 24.—The National Clothiers' Association's convention adjourned last night after electing officers. Boston was selected as the next meeting place, March 19 and 20, 1907.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

WOMEN WITH YOUNG CHILDREN

Require at this time the pure nourishment contained in Father John's Medicine. It builds up the body, making flesh and strength. No drugs.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATRES FOR THE WEEK

This is the final week of the regular season of Boston's theatredom. Many of the local theatres close their doors on Saturday night, some of them not to reopen again until August, while others will remain closed only a few days and will then reopen for long runs of summer attractions in the form of musical comedies. It promises to be the busiest Summer at the theatres that Boston has ever witnessed. All of the out-door amusement resorts will be open in another week and these will add to the interest.

Keith's Theatre

There is more good hearty laughter in the Keith programme this week than is usually crowded into one bill even at that house. Among the fun-makers are Gertrude Mansfield and Caryl Wilbur in "61 Prospect Street"; Charlie Case, blackface comedian; Besnah and Miller in a comedy singing and dancing sketch, and Raymond and Caverly, German burlesquers. The Four Fords, the greatest dancing quartet in vaudeville, come next week.

Majestic Theatre

But four more opportunities remain to witness Margaret Anglin's soul-stirring exposition of the character of Hester Trent in "Zira" at the Majestic Theatre. This is the finest exhibition of emotional acting seen on the American stage by an American actress in many years.

Colonial Theatre

Grace George has surprised Bostonians by her versatility and she makes "The Marriage of William Ashe" one of the most interesting plays of the season at the Colonial Theatre. It has all of the charm of the great story by Mrs. Humphry Ward and is especially attractive because of Miss George's very strong work. This is the last week of the engagement here.

Tremont Theatre

Saturday night will see the last of "The Stolen Story" at the Tremont Theatre, and on Wednesday afternoon (Memorial Day) next there will be produced for the first time on any stage a new musical novelty, "The Man from Now," with Harry Bulger, Helen Hale, Lucy Tonge, Frances Demerest, Hattie Arnold, Walter Lawrence, Charles Meyers, John Keefe and others in the cast. The book and lyrics are by John Kendrick Bangs and Vincent P. Bryan, music by Manuel Klein.

Empire Theatre

"Too Much Johnson" and John Craig are running neck and neck for popularity at the Empire Theatre this week. It is Mr. Craig's first appearance here as leading man. The part of "Ananias Billings" seems as if made for him. Next week the Empire stock company plays Henry Arthur Jones's modern play, "Mrs. Dane's Defence."

Castle Square Theatre

"Christopher, Jr.," at the Castle Square Theatre this week is receiving the reward of approval and applause deserved by the really excellent performance by the stock company. It is worth a good deal to see the act of Edward Wade, the best and most amusing thing he has ever done. He says just one word during the entire play, but his pantomime is wonderfully well done. Next week the play will be "The Jilt."

Globe Theatre

The Fays continue to mystify and to please big audiences at the Globe Theatre, for they are playing to "capacity" at every performance in this their last week there. The matinee to-morrow afternoon will be for ladies only. The final matinee on Saturday will be for everyone. "Buster Brown" and "Tige" come next week to the Globe. This afternoon between five and six o'clock "Buster Brown" picture books will be given away free to every boy and girl calling at the Globe Theatre ticket office.

Columbia Theatre

Eugene Jerge, whose illustrated songs have become the feature at the Columbia this week, has some superb views thrown upon the canvas. The descriptive ballad seems doubly attractive when pictured as the singer unfolds the story. "The Innocent Maids," who cavort daily through the two bright, snappy burlesques, add to the gaiety. The amateurs will hand out their merry roundelays to-morrow night.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Aga, the $5,000 mystery, the greatest act of levitation ever seen in Boston, is one of the leading attractions this week at Austin & Stone's. Roscoe, the mind reading horse; Banjo, the giant bull; the Minstrel Maids and a great group of variety artists are other features of an unusually fine show.

Lyceum Theatre

Twenty-five members of the Boston Newsboys' Protective Union attended the Lyceum Theatre Tuesday Tuesday evening as a mark of appreciation of Miss Pearl Reed, who appeared at their entertainment Sunday evening. She was the recipient of a handsome bouquet of roses from the boys. Miss Reed is one of the favorites of the "Trans-Oceanics," which are playing at the Lyceum this week.

Palace Theatre

"Razzle Dazzle" and "A Senator for an Hour" are the titles of two funny burlesques that are presented at the Palace Theatre this week. They abound in good comedy situations and excellent specialties, while the music is particularly good. There are a number of bright and breezy acts in the olio.

Howard Theatre

It is only necessary to name over the bill at the Old Howard this week to prove that it is exceptionally good. There are the Howard Burlesquers, with George B. Alexander in "The Daisy Stakes;" Myles McCarthy and company, Redford and Winchester, "Sandy" Chapman, Newell and Niblo, Sid Baxter and a dozen other varieties.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

Charlotte Hunt has again proven her strength and artistic ability in essaying the role of Portia in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. She makes the character live and her conception of it approaches very nearly that of the great stars who have played the role at the higher priced houses. It is a crowning achievement in her dramatic career.

Miss Anglin's New Play

"Young Fernald," the new comedy by Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland and Beulah Dix, which will have its first performance at the Majestic Theatre next Monday evening, is in active rehearsal at that playhouse. Both Henry Miller, who produces the new play, and Margaret Anglin, are said to have excellent parts in the new piece.

Castle Square Opera Season

With the close of the present week all the singers engaged for the summer opera season at the Castle Square will have assembled, ready to begin the work of rehearsals. The opening comes Monday evening, June 4, and crowded houses are assured for the first production of "The Mikado" here in several seasons.

THE BEST KNOWN

The Opinion of Patients Who Have Tried the Treatment is Valuable to Those Who Suffer.

Mrs. A. B. Morgan, a highly respected lady, who resides at 133 Myrtle street, Boston, says: "Sleepless nights occasioned by the pains of rheumatism that had attacked my joints with great vigor, impelled me to seek the undoubted skill of the Osmo-Chemic Scientists. Their treatment is the best known for chronic troubles, and they quickly restored me to health."

HEARTFELT GRATITUDE

For Restored Health Mrs. Tuck, a Noted Singer, Lends Her Voice to Praise the Osmo-Chemic Physicians.

Mrs. G. B. Tuck, the well-known singer, who resides at Needham, Mass., P. O. Box 60, relating her experience with the Osmo-Chemic physicians, said: "A pain at the end of my spine was the first indication I had of a disease that involved my entire system and caused me such great suffering that I consulted the Osmo-Chemic experts, who treated me so successfully that I shall ever remember them with heartfelt gratitude, and consent to the publication of this testimonial in the hope of directing other hopeless sufferers to the Osmo-Chemic institution, where kindness and skill go hand in hand."

SATISFYING FEELING

Of Good Health That Came to Mr. Ritchie After He Was Treated by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians.

Mr. W. L. Ritchie resides at No. 33 Winter street, Quincy, Mass. In relating his experience with the Osmo-Chemic physicians for a deep-seated and dangerous affection of the kidneys, he says: "I felt that my life would be exceedingly short unless I found relief from the insupportable agony of kidney disease. I walked like a man bent with age. The doctors I consulted could not give me any relief. In fact, I grew worse rapidly, when in desperation, like a drowning man grasping at a straw, I dragged myself to the Osmo-Chemic doctors and had them treat me. I seemed to get a little better each day, until that satisfying feeling of good health came back to me again. Nothing that I could say would be adequate to express my feeling of appreciation for what the Osmo-Chemic physicians are doing for suffering humanity."

The White Sox come to the Hub to-day to finish the week out after receiving a few drubbings from the Highlanders, and perhaps this Western team, unlike the others, will let the local band wedge in a win just to see what it feels like.

Uncle Cy Young is scheduled to greet the visitors and the warm weather shoul find him at his strongest.

The farewell with the Tigers was another pitiful demise of the lowly home bunch of once was ball tossers.

As an eminent doctor and follower of the game who once led the Harvard team said, it was pathetic to watch the vain struggles of the one time greats.

He thought the best remedy was to send the whole team away for a month and make them forget all about the game and on the return they would be able to go through their paces in the proper style.

Expressions of surprise were heard on all sides when the dejected fans wended their way out of the gloom on the size of the daily attendance. It certainly is a tribute to a team which has no parallel in diamond history. It goes to show that baseball lovers in the Hub are so educated to the game that they must have it even if the outsiders do all the winning. Naturally they know whats the matter with the team, but are powerless to act.

Real dub playing was the cost of the last game with the Tigers, at least that was the general opinion expressed, which found no disputers.

Again the local men outbatted the fiery Tigers, but went down because of errors.

The team played without the services of Captain Collins, who sat on the bench in street clothes. His knee joint was out of commission and he could not show his real speed. Godwin, who covered the bag, got along amazingly well, but could show no stick work.

The game was as good as won at the end of the second inning till the break came in the third that allowed the Tigers to draw even. Dinneen was pitching masterly ball, the few bumps coming wide apart, but the usual ascension came around as usual and there was no pulling the balloon down.

Grimshaw endeavored to do some fast fielding in the fatal third by slamming a ground hit to second to cut off a runner. That throw ought to have been photographed as the ball rolled out in the field while the runner scampered around the bases.

BRITT AGREES WITH TERRY ON RULES

NEW YORK, May 24.—To avoid having any trouble in the encounter between Terry McGovern and Jimmy Britt, who are matched to fight ten rounds before the Twentieth Century Athletic Club on Monday night at the Garden, a meeting of all interested was held at the Hotel Metropole. Terry was represented by his manager, Joe Humphries, while Willus Britt took care of his brother's interests, and Harry Pollok and Tim Hurst spoke up for the club.

After much wrangling it was decided to have the men fight under straight Marquis of Queensberry rules. This will avoid a repetition of the McGovern-Nelson fiasco of recent date. The boys have to protect themselves at all times, and if they clinch the referee must separate them. No hitting is allowed in clinches, or when the referee has his hands on either of the fighters. Tim Hurst, the referee, then announced that he would positively disqualify either of the fighters that broke the rules. This was satisfactory to all concerned, and the meeting was adjourned. A number of bets were made, with Britt the favorite at 5 to 3.

AUTOISTS WILL ATTACK "DEAD HORSE HILL"

BY J. C. KERRISON.

WORCESTER, May 24.—The conquest of Dead Horse Hill, just outside of Worcester, on the road to Leicester, is being undertaken to-day. Something like 115 different entries are endeavoring to outdo each other in making a quick ascent of the steep grade. The day is all that can be desired for such a purpose, and the road, winding though it may be, was never in better shape for trials of speed and hill climbing ability than it is this morning. It is rumored around town that the Stanley flyer, which was built for the coming Vanderbilt race, and which was to make its bebute in this contest, will be conspicious by its absence. It was here yesterday. It is not to be found to-day. Rumor has it that in a private trial of the hill yesterday the car failed to perform to the satisfaction of either its owner or driver, proving somewhat headstrong, and was immediately returned to the factory for slight alterations. These will be made in season to get the car in shape for the Memorial Day races at Readville.

The heart of the Commonwealth never contained a greater crowd of motorists or machines than it does to-day. The streets are alive with them. They came from every point of the compass. All morning long each main thoroughfare into the city was overcrowded. The machines here represent an investment of millions of dollars. It is the greatest turnout of motor vehicles seen this year. The sight in the vicinity of Dead Horse Hill is one of seeming confusion and yet so well has the committee attended to the details, that there is in this seeming chaos a perfectly well defined plan of action. Each individual knows full well when it is his time to breast the hill and go against the existing hill record.

With the Vanderbilt steamer out of the way there is every indication that the big honors will be taken by the special racing machines, those entered by J. R. Harding of Boston, Sammy Stevens of Rome, N. Y., who last year met with disaster on the hill; Otto B. Cole of Boston, and the big stock cars of six cylinder, such, for instance, as the Stevens-Duryea and the National. In the amateur classes there is the keenest of competition and the closest of rivalry.

There is no question but what all records will be lowered on the hill some time this afternoon, and the fame of even the great Eagle Rock climb will be somewhat dulled and besmirched. While of course great things are expected from the racing machines, the real hard, gruelling work of the day will surely be performed by the stock cars. It is the work of these cars which may have an important bearing on the plans of prospective purchasers.

O'BRIEN TO MEET GOODWIN TO-NIGHT

Rouse O'Brien and Chester Goodwin, two of the fastest featherweights in New England, meet to-night at the Lincoln A. C. to settle the title.

When they boxed before the result was a draw, but both boys are determined to sway the decision in their favor and win decisively, leaving no doubt who is the better.

Goodwin refused to weigh in at the last meeting, but will have to on this occasion, as they have posted forfeits to be at 124 pounds at 4 o'clock and there will be no claim made for overweight.

Both boys have increased their hitting powers since their last battle and their ability to take punishment will be clearly shown.

Goodwin is a hot favorite in his own town, Chelsea, and will have a lot of rooters behind him, while there is not a more popular fighter in the Peninsula district than Rouse, and his following will be on hand to see that he gets plenty of encouragement.

It should be a clever exhibition as well as a vicious one, as the fighters are two of the best in handling themselves in the ring and know all the fine points.

Each wants to secure victory as the winner will be able to get on with some big game, and the rivalry is so keen that both have agreed that two judges besides the referee will render the decision.

A good list of preliminaries have been aranged for the fight fans.

YALE, 13; PENN, 0.

NEW HAVEN, May 24.—Yale's erratic baseball team turned another somerset and this time landed on its feet. It trimmed Pennsylvania by a score of 13 to 0. At Philadelphia on April 21 the Quakers whipped Yale by a score of 5 to 4.

LAST DAY OF AUCTION SALE AT READVILLE

READVILLE RACE TRACK, May 24.—This was the closing day of the Fasig-Tipton sale and it was surprising how the size of the crowd kept up to the standard of earlier in the week. Among the horses offered were a number with a future on the speedway and in matinee racing. This was a magnet for spirited bidding among the local horsemen, who were looking for something to have a lot of fun with this season.

One that attracted considerable attention was the pacing gelding Knox's Gelatine Boy, 2:09¾, and a reputed trial of 2:04. The pacer William L., 2:11¾, was well remembered by those who played a sure thing at Dover a few years ago, only to have their hopes blasted by his winning the race and knocking their favorite galley west. He was little thought of before the race, but proved superior to the supposed-to-be cinch.

It was like meeting old friends when Bent F., 2:15¼; Sally Hooker, 2:17¼; Baby Logan, Richmond, 2:24¼; Max G., 2:12¼, and Harry M. appeared before George Bain to be sold, they are so familiar to Boston horsemen.

ASHLEY TO BOX DUNLEAVY

F. J. Cronin, for Guy Ashley of Fall River, and H. K. Gilman, for Jack Dunleavy of St. Louis, met at this office yesterday and matched their proteges to fight fifteen rounds at 148 pounds before a club offering the best purse.

Jeffries to Report Fight Between Nelson and Herrera for American

James J. Jeffries, the undisputed champion fighter of the world, will give to the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN his impressions, round by round, of the big battle between Battling Nelson and Aurelio Herrera, in Los Angeles, on Friday night. Besides Jeffries there will be at the ringside for the AMERICAN the famous authority on pugilism, William Naughton; Van Loan, the clever descriptive writer on sport, and Pabst, an expert in telling of the exchange of blows during a contest. The fight promises to be one of the fastest and fiercest between lightweights ever seen in this country.

SPORTS WON'T BACK HERRERA

BY TAD.

A. Herrera, the "Greaser," will get a try at lightweight honors to-morrow, when he faces Mr. B. Nelson, of Hegewich, Ill.

Since Herrera knocked out Young Corbett in five rounds his stock has taken an awful boost, and sports all over the country feel that if there is one man who can toss the wallop over on Nelson's jaw it is this same Herrera.

Herrera has the wallop. He has knocked out enough of the best men in the world as proof. He was the first man who ever toppled over that tough customer, Kid Broad. He was the first one who ever knocked out Benny Yanger. He made Terry McGovern feel like a drunken man in their fight, only to miss his chance by the gong. He is one of the hardest hitters of his weight in the world, and is dangerous at all times with either hand.

There is no time in the fight that Herrera doesn't figure. He figures at all times, but his fights differ as thumb marks do. He never fights two battles alike. He is a bad man to bet on, as he has you worried all the time. Anyone is liable to lick Herrera. He is not a consistent performer. Some of the poorest boxers in the country have decisions over him, while our best boys, such as Corbett, Yanger, Broad and Young Mowatt, have been knocked out.

It may be that with Nelson he will be a demon. On the other hand, he might put up a slouchy battle that would make you sick to look at. No one can tell until he gets into the ring whether he is right or not. He has the wallop all the time, but he feels different in every battle. He likes to sing—that's his middle name. He likes the heavy going, but in some fights he backs away and in others he wades in fearing nothing.

Nelson will make him travel—that's a pipe—but whether he will travel backward or forward is what puts him on the short end in the betting.

It ought to be a ripping good fight. He's sore at the Dane, and may go into the ring "frightfully peevish," eh?

NELSON, WHO MEETS HERRERA TOMORROW NIGHT, SAYS HE'S GOING AFTER MEXICAN FROM GONG

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Battling Nelson talked freely last night of his fight with Herrera to-morrow night. The little iron-clad figures that Herrera will hit him. He has never claimed to be clever enough to evade punishment. His long suit is taking the gaff.

"Didn't I beat him once before?" asked Nelson, "and didn't he hit me as hard as he ever hit anybody. I'm willing to admit that I'm not going at him with my jaw out there where he can't possibly miss it.

"That would be foolish, and any way I don't believe in taking chances unless I have to, but it is safe to say that he will land that right hand on the jaw sometimes. All right; we grant that much.

"I ought to make a terrific fight and you can say, and make it as strong as you like, that I am going after him the minute the bell says bing.

"This business of stalling around and waiting for openings is all the bunk. I don't fight that way. I know his style. I know the best way to beat him and I'm going to wade into him the second they turn me loose."

Nelson will spar up to this afternoon. Kid Williams drew his blue envelope the other day. The Kid attended a social function and somebody started a fight. The Kid was in the storm centre and won out with a wrenched back. Harry Baker is doing all the sparring with Nelson, and as the little amateur champion has recovered his wind he sets a fast clip for six rounds. Nelson likes to work with a fast man, as the pace can never be too warm for him. The harder his sparring partner works the better Nelson likes it.

The Herrera money is beginning to show up and there is a tendency to give better than 10 to 7. Those who have seen the Bakersfield man work do not think he is a legitimate short ender, and certainly any man who can whip the right over Herrera is entitled to consideration in any sort of company.

Nelson is satisfied with his condition and says the only thing which can hurt him now is an accident. He eats three big meals a day, sleeps like a top and does a spin on the road which brings him into the hotel an easy winner over his road partners. Condition will cut a big figure in this fight and both men are fit to fight now. One more day will give them the feather edge—that trained-to-the-minute fitness which sends a man into fight the best fight that is in him.

A road run during the forenoon and six rounds of boxing with his brother, Mauro, and Tommy Jacobs, his manager, finished Herrera's hard training. To-day he will take a short run, but there will be no more boxing. According to Jacobs he has reached weight and will only do enough work from now until weighing-in time at 6 o'clock Friday evening, to hold his weight stationary.

HARVARD READY FOR BIG GAMES

Interest in the outcome of the intercollegiate track meet to be held to-morrow and Saturday of this week on the stadium track on Soldiers Field, is at fever heat at Cambridge among the Harvard undergraduates. Owing to the excellent records made by the Harvard men this year, and their victory over Yale in the dual track meet last Saturday, Harvard men believe that the Crimson has a very excellent chance to win those classic American games.

The Crimson stands a very excellent chance of winning three first places—in the quarter with Captain Dives, in the mile with Minot, and in the shot-put with Stephenson. Of these men Dives has not been particularly well for the past two weeks, though this fact did not show in his running in the games against Yale Saturday. With Dodge in the 220, Stone in the mile, and Oveson and Kersburg in the hammer, the Crimson has more than a fighting chance of landing firsts and very excellent chances of coming second.

In the 100-yard dash, Lockwood, Harvard's best man, will find it hard sledding with Whitham, Dear and Cartmell of Pennsylvania, Torrey of Yale and Gamble of Princeton to run against. If the Crimson lands a point in this event she will be doing well.

'I'LL WIN IN A ROMP' NELSON

Battling Nelson sent the following personal telegram to the Sporting Editor of the Boston American. It can be seen that the Dane has no fear of the outcome of his fight with the Mexican to-morrow night.

By BATTLING NELSON

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 24.—I am in perfect condition for this fight and I expect to get the candy in a romp. I beat Herrera in Butte, and also trimmed him when I was only his sparring partner.

I have all the confidence in the world that I will be able to repeat those performances, and go them a little better by winning by the knockout route. My friends in the East can count upon there being a knockout as sure as the sun rises and sets, and I feel sure that I will be the one to send over the sleep producer.

Most of the folk out here think the same way, for I am now a 10 to 8 favorite.

I want to say right out in meeting that Britt is trying to crawl. His recent statements look queer to me when it is considered that I put the proposition up to him to post the money for a return fight. Jimmy had things all his own way out here, but he now has to take his chances on even terms with other fighters. He is a good fighter and will do better now that he hasn't an army of friends to help him win a fight.

PITTSBURG, May 24.—Will it be four straight shutouts for the Boston Nationals at the hands of the Pirates to-day, or will the Hub team break the ice and score a run? Possibly to-day the Bostons may get together enough runs to pull out a victory.

This was the Bostons' farewell game in Smoketown, and they were very desirous of leaving a favorable impression of their abilities on the diamond with the local baseball public.

The Boston Nationals are making great efforts to duplicate the record of the Boston Americans. The former have now lost six straight against nineteen of their confreres. But the Collins team has been left in the shade by the Tenneyites in regard to shutouts. The Nationals have now lost four straight games without scoring a run.

The Pirates expected they would have another cinch with the Boston contingent to-day. The locals are hot on the trail of the Cubs and the Giants, and another victory from the Tenneyites will help some to improve their standing.

AN OFFICIAL GUARANTEE WITH EVERY HUSBAND FROM A RELIABLE CONCERN

THE ease with which a number of eminent bigamists, now figuring in the public eye, induced women to marry them seems to indicate that our complex society has evolved another need.

It is for a respectable, reliable, recognized and duly licensed marriage broker, who will not only be an understudy to Cupid but a guardian angel who will head confiding women off from making fool marriages with strange men who are already provided with wives and other impediments to matrimony.

The one fact that has brought out most clearly in the trials of these gentlemen who have made a profession—and a lucrative one—of marrying is that there is a large class of women with snug little fortunes of their own that are so anxious to be Mrs. instead of Miss that they will hie to the altar with any man who is passably good-looking, and who has a civil tongue in his head.

They are so desirous of having a husband and a home of their own that they are plungers in a game that is sufficiently risky at best. Yet they are good women, sensible women about other things, often women who have had enough intelligence and thrift to have accumulated themselves the money that is their undoing, and when we hear of these women, who have been shrewd enough to run successful boarding houses or capable enough to rise to good salaried positions in an office or store, figuring in the roles of the deceived, we marvel at the sudden idiocy that seemed to overtake them, and that led them to marry a man without investigating his past or taking cognizance of his present.

Natural Wish

Such folly seems to us more comic than tragic, and we are ready enough to laugh at the overwillingness it shows on the woman's part to marry, but in reality there is nothing either surprising or ridiculous in woman's desire for a mate.

She sees the long years of the future stretching before her, lonely and companionless, and herself existing as the fringe on somebody else's family or else maintaining a solitary menage in company with a canary bird and a pug dog.

Her friends are married and are absorbed in their own affairs. Her own romantic dreams are dead. She no longer looks for the fairy prince and wild adoration, but she figures it out that if she could marry some man of suitable age and condition, and add her little fortune to his, they could be very comfortable, and enjoy a comradeship that might not have many thrills to it, but that would be a lot better than the empty life of the old maid, and the old bachelor.

And she is dead right—if only she could get the right man. The argument is sound. It's only the application that is at fault. She has no legitimate way of getting at the right man, and it's invariably the wrong man who comes along, and whom in her desperation she takes.

With a Guarantee

It is to prevent such catastrophies that we need a marriage broker. With him the woman who wants to marry ought to be able to file the bill of particulars she requires in a husband and get a guaranteed article, just as she would if she went to a reputable real estate agent or livery man and demanded a certain kind of a house or a horse.

The real estate agent might not have on hand the flat with eight rooms, all southern exposure, steam heat and fine view that she desires; neither might the liveryman be prepared to furnish at a moment's notice the horse that is kind and gentle, broken to double harness and that never balks or backs its ears that she demands, but they would enter her order on their books and look about until they found something to suit her.

The marriage broker could use precisely the same tactics, and, having received a commission for a husband, who was light-complexioned, of good moral habits, who never used tobacco or drank, or went out of nights, that the lady wished, it would be up to him to hustle out and hunt him up for her.

It would not be as romantic to have matches made by a legally authorized marriage broker, as to have them manufactured by a mythical deity. It might, at first, be a little shocking to overhear a lady, who casually met a friend on the street, stop and say: "Oh, I have just been down to my broker's and ordered a nice domestic husband, who is in the grocery business, and is a church member," or "Oh, I am in such a hurry. My broker has just telephoned me that he has found exactly what I want in a husband—tall, handsome, with a black mustache, good company, and fond of going to the theatre, and with a nice little furniture store, which is in a prosperous condition.

Many Advantages

"Goodness knows it is time! He's had that commission and been on the lookout for one for me for six months, but I am so particular."

But there would be one great big advantage in the broker-made match. The broker would furnish a clean bill of sale with the goods he delivered. There would be no previous mortgages on it, and nothing turning up after the wedding to invalidate the woman's title to what she had gotten.

Nor would the marriage broker's clientele be confined to the fair sex. There are many men who would be glad enough to marry if they could only be brought into communication, somehow, with the kind of woman who is their ideal, but whom they lack the enterprise to find for themselves.

Plenty of bashful youths who have come from the country and don't know a soul in the city, but are getting a good salary, would like to meet, object matrimony, a nice young girl who has saved up enough from her salary as a stenographer to help furnish a flat.

Plenty of elderly widowers would like to marry a comfortable lady of mature years, with an amiable disposition, who had a little money and was a good cook.

It would be the beneficent mission of the marriage broker to bring these affinities together.

The schatchen is a great success among the Hebrews. Why should the marriage broker be less so among the Gentiles?

Don't Quarrel With Your Sweetheart, Says Beatrice Fairfax

By Beatrice Fairfax

THE other day a young girl tried to kill herself because she had quarreled with her sweetheart. Without his love she felt that life was not worth living.

As a matter of fact, he had struck her a most brutal blow, seriously injuring her, and he certainly was not worth dying for.

If she recovers she will realize this in time and come to wonder what she saw in the man to love.

Life is too short for quarrels.

Our time should be spent in letting our dear ones know how much we love them instead of hurting them by unkind words.

Half the time when a girl quarrels with her sweetheart she does so solely for the pleasure of making up again.

But some time there will come a quarrel which will not be easy to make up, and then will come tears and heartache.

In justice to the man I must say that half the time he does not know what the quarrel is all about.

He knows he is on the defensive and in disgrace, but has not the faintest idea what he has done.

He does not realize that the lady of his heart has practically created the entire situation for the sake of the excitement and pleasure of making him unhappy.

It's a bad habit, girls, and is bound to reach an unpleasant climax some day.

The worm will turn, you know, and no matter how petty these little spats may be, they leave ugly scars.

Be content to let the course of true love run as smooth as nature will allow it to.

Quarrels come easily enough without your going half way to meet them.

Don't quarrel with any one if you can possibly help it. One quarrelsome member of a household can poison the entire home atmosphere.

Quarrels between sisters or brothers and sisters are only too frequent. A little patience and forbearance are all that is necessary to stop them.

If you see that a certain topic irritates your sister avoid it as much as possible.

Keep away from people's pet abominations, avoid subjects they are sensitive about.

Never be ashamed to confess yourself in the wrong and to sue for forgiveness. A quarrel that is left to fester overnight is always worse the next day.

Remember that "Many go forth in the morning who have never come back at night," and never let any of your dear ones go off in the morning with hard feelings between you and them.

There is no pain equal to that of being unable to forgive because it is too late. It is only ugly, stubborn pride that keeps you from asking or granting forgiveness.

Don't quarrel with your sweethearts, because in time they will weary of such a stormy courtship and seek girls who are content with more peaceable methods.

Don't quarrel with your family, because if you do you will develop into an ugly, unhappy woman.

And don't quarrel with your friends, because they won't put up with it, and some fine day you will awake to the fact that you have no friends.

In short, dear girls, don't quarrel with any one unless you want to develop into cross-grained, peevish, unloved women.

Appetizing Dishes For Warm Weather

THERE is nothing more wholesome than salads, and one of a tempting variety should be part of the daily menu. They are particularly good for dinner, as they counteract the effects of the heavier food.

TO SERVE SALADS at their very best they should be thoroughly washed and allowed to stand in ice cold water. This makes them firm and crisp.

DAINTY INDIVIDUAL SALADS are prepared by arranging on plates the small cup-shaped leaves of crisp lettuce, placing them together so as to form little nests. For a filling use one cup each of chopped celery, English walnuts, apples and a little salt. Into each lettuce cup place a large tablespoonful of the mixture. The mayonnaise dressing may either be put on top after the cups are filled or mixed with the ingredients before filling.

NUT AND CHERRY SALAD.—Use preserved or home-canned cherries that have been put up without pits. Drain off all of the juice, and into the middle of each cherry place a hazel nut that has been blanched by lying in boiling water for a few moments. On each salad plate put several lettuce leaves, heap a few spoonfuls of the nuts and cherries on them, and pour a good mayonnaise dressing over them. The salad should be placed on the ice until ready to serve.

CREAMED SPINACH.—After washing the spinach through four waters put it into a large pot and cover slowly. The moisture that remains on the leaves, together with the juice of the vegetable, will form enough liquor to prevent its scorching. Cook for twenty minutes, stirring frequently, sprinkle with salt and put into a colander to drain. When the liquid is thoroughly pressed out, put the spinach into a chopping bowl and chop as fine as possible. Put into saucepan one tablespoonful of flour and two of butter, and when they are blended pour in the spinach. Cook for several minutes, and pour over the spinach half a cupful of cream in which a pinch of soda has been dissolved, and cook three minutes longer. Add pepper and salt and a pinch of nutmeg, and beat hard for several minutes.

If any of the creamed spinach is left over it may be made into a very appetizing dish. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs and a teaspoonful of butter, with pepper and salt to taste. Then beat into it half a gill of cream and the whites of the eggs beaten light. Put into a buttered pudding dish and bake in a quick oven.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Awkward for Freddy

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

WHEN Mr. Freddy Delamere awoke the next morning in his dingy bed-sitting room the fictitious elation of spirit was gone. Last night the whiskey had produced a recklessness that was far from being a usual characteristic of Freddy; this morning he was prudence personified; the reaction had set in.

He knew nothing of the man's plans, except that Bougelstein required his services in annexing the famous diamond. Knowing him as well as he did, he felt reasonably sure that all the risk would be his (Freddy's), and common sense told him that diamonds, especially famous diamonds, are not to be stolen with the ease that Mr. Bougelstein represented would be the case with the Herries diamond.

He rose and breakfasted; then went out and bought a new suit of clothes out of the money his friend had obligingly advanced as a retainer; but the more he reflected the less he liked having anything to do with the scheme.

It was not as if he had no prospect of making any money. Herries was rich, and unless Herries had bolted he knew where to find him. A letter sent to his home would be forwarded.

Herries could afford to pay—would be only too glad to pay—for his secret being kept. Would pay handsomely. Why should he, Freddy, run the risk of being caught attempting to steal the diamond when there was money to be had without any risk at all for the mere asking? It was all very well to argue that John Herries would not dare to prosecute; it was possible he might be placed in such a position that he would be compelled to prosecute.

"No, Freddy; it is not good enough. Smaller profits and no risk are the line of business you shine in. You'd best stick to your line. As soon as Bougelstein comes I'll tell him I won't touch his job. Let him do it himself if he's so keen."

And in this frame of mind he returned home to wait for Mr. Bougelstein.

He heard a knock at the door, heard the thick voice speaking to his landlady, and the sound of footsteps coming up the creaking stairs. His door opened and the face of Bougelstein appeared.

"Glad to see you, dear old chap," said Freddy, trying to hide his nervousness under an effusive manner; he was a little afraid of Bougelstein as a man of weak will is afraid of one whose stronger will he is endeavoring to oppose.

Besides, he had spent the money which he knew Bougelstein would never have advanced except in consideration of his promise.

"I've been thinking over that little matter we discussed last night, Bougelstein, and—well, the fact is, I don't—er—think I should be of much use in the affair, so I might as well tell you at once. Sorry, but you'll easily get somebody else."

Freddy was relieved, once the plunge had been taken, but he did not look at Bougelstein during his halting speech. The pupils of the man's eyes had a trick of narrowing like those of a cat when he was looking at any one with whom he was annoyed; Freddy did not wish to see that look, and he glanced anywhere but at him, and did not see the gleam of a smile—rather a cruel smile—that flashed in his eyes for a minute.

Perhaps Bougelstein, who was an excellent judge of character and knew Delamere's weak, vacillating nature to a nicety, had come prepared for some such crying-down as this from the brave pledges of last night.

"Sorry you've had the trouble of coming, old chap," added Freddy, "though I'm always glad to see you."

"I think you'll say you're glad to see me now, in a minute or two," said Bougelstein, in such an odd voice that Freddy looked up. "Never mind about the diamond; you know best whether you care to stand in, Freddy, old chap. I've some bad news for you."

"Bad news!" cried Delamere in alarm.

"You've hit it in once, Freddy; hit it in once. I've heard only this morning that Leviathan Levi, the world's biggest bookmaker, has been saying that you not only kept his books, but kept his cash, too, and—what he call—beat it from Sheepshead."

"It's all a mistake!" stammered Freddy. "I—I did write sheet for him, and—and I left hurriedly, but I can explain all that. And it was only a ten-spot when all's said and done. I—I found it among my own money, by mistake."

"Vell, I heard only this morning," went on Izzy, "that Levi—er—the vorld's greatest bookmaker—has been on the bat—probably othervise he vouldn't have bothered about small fry like you, Freddy, especially as you say it was only a tenner—and vas heard to say that de'd have you sent away, even if it cost him fifty dollars. I'm sadly afraid he means it, too, Freddy," said his friend, with much feeling. "In your leetle bit of racing you've perhaps come across Long-Nosed Teddy?"

"Why, he's one of Leviathan Levi's crowd!" cried Freddy, thoroughly frightened, his face the color of a badly washed tablecloth. "What of him?"

"Don't go near the vindow!" cried Bougelstein warningly, "don't let him see you!"

"Is he outside?" gasped Freddy, his knees knocking together, his voice quavering to shrillness.

Bougelstein nodded a gloomy assent.

A Sad Predicament

Freddy walked to the window and peeped out cautiously.

Izzy's words had been only too true. There on the other side of the road he saw a brawny, rather bandy-legged man, wearing a red handkerchief round his neck, with abnormally long arms, and an ear that had been battered out of shape during the course of his professional duties, like that of a cat given to fighting.

Freddy recognized the man at once; that was Long-Nosed Teddy. The man was talking to a companion, also recognized by Freddy as belonging to the Levi gang, and known as Flash Sam.

The pugilist was grinning from ear to ear while he conversed with Flash Sam, as if enjoying an exquisite joke. That sinister smile and the square bulldog jaw beneath the rat-trap-like mouth made Mr. Delamere's blood run cold.

"Go back from the vindow. Don't let them see you!" cried Bougelstein, as if much alarmed for the safety of his friend. "They mean peezness, you see. Leviathan Levi vill pay the fine. The minute you set foot in the street they'll have you! Is there a back vay out of the house?"

"No," groaned Freddy.

"Then you're a prisoner, my dear chap! Mean trick of Levi, I call it," said Izzy. His air of indignation was as unmistakable as his sympathy had been. "I'm surprised at Levi. But I'm glad I was able to varn you."

Freddy stood still behind the curtain staring out of the window as if fascinated at the two men who were walking up and down the road past the house.

His face was a picture of abject distress that he was powerless to hide. Once the pugilist made a playful feint of sparring up at Flash Sam with those long arms of his and the enormous beefy hands, and involuntarily Freddy drew in his breath with a shivering gasp. He had heard stories of Long-Nosed Teddy's terrible "knock-out" blow.

From the man standing behind the curtain on the window Mr. Bougelstein's eyes wandered round the room.

His gaze fell on an object resting upon a small table that seemed rather out of place in this cheap, dingy lodging house bed-sitting room.

It was a cigarette box, half covered by some newspapers, and it appeared to be of silver. It struck Mr. Bougelstein as being rather odd that Delamere, whom he knew—had, indeed, been at the pains of finding out—to be hard up, should be in the possession of a silver cigarette box.

Worse and Worse

He crossed the room to it quite silently with almost the stealth of a cat in his movements—not that he cared whether Freddy noticed his action or not, but it seemed natural to the man to walk with a soft tread—and picked up the box. Freddy was too much absorbed at the window to pay any attention to him.

The box was certainly silver—Mr. Bougelstein's experienced eye told him that fact at once. And there was an inscription on it. He glanced at it.

The first look of surprise that the words engraved there brought to his face gave place to a peculiar smile, and a swift gleam of cunning flashed into his eyes. He laughed quite noiselessly to himself.

Then, very deliberately, he read out aloud the florid inscription on the silver cigarette box:

"To Zingara—Votive-queen of the dance—this tribute of deepest admiration and esteem is laid before her peerless feet by a few friends who know what genius is."

Long before Mr. Bougelstein had finished reading the preposterous inscription on this gift to a woman who now lay in her grave Delamere had turned sharply round with a startled look in his face.

He crossed over quickly to Bougelstein, and made an attempt to snatch the box out of his hand.

"Here, give that to me!" he cried. "It's mine. What do you mean by meddling in my private affairs? Give it to me, I say!"

Bougelstein laughed his low, slow laugh, but he did not relinquish the box.

"Yours, Freddy?" he asked, with elevated eyebrows. "And when and how did it become yours? Vy, the police are advertising for an article absolutely identical with this, inscription and all, Freddy—missing from the room of the dancing voman who was murdered in that Lexington avenue flat; and every pawnbroker in New York has been furnished with a description of it!"

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

FIND OUT THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A couple of years ago I met a man at a dinner party. He came home with me and I have met him quite often since then. He appears very fond of me, but has never asked to call on me as one would think he would under the circumstances. Quite recently I was told that he was married. Have met him since then and I did not mention what I had heard. I like him very much, and would you ask him the next time I see him if this is so, and would you ask him to call on you? He lives in another city and is not here very often. I don't want to grow too interested in him if he is married, and don't you think that he would ask to be allowed to call when he plainly shows that he is fond of me, if something of this kind was not the case. I am twenty-three and he is some years older.

F. B.

YOU must find out if he really is married and if so cease going out with him. It is too bad that you should have to give him up, but there really is nothing else for you to do. You see, you might grow to care for him very much, and then you would be very unhappy. Find out the next time you see him.

THE GIRL'S FAULT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man and am deeply in love with a young lady, three years my junior.

There is a young man who is keeping company with another sister, and every time he calls up to the house he fools with the young lady that I am keeping company with, and he tells her that she knows she loves him and also kisses her. When I call she tells me about it, but I always tell her why does she allow him to do it; she says that she can't help it. I thought that I would call him aside the first chance I meet him and ask him if he calls to see his young lady or else does he come to see mine.

S. K. M.

I THINK the girl is to blame. She certainly could stop it if she wanted to. At the same time, I think it would be a good idea to speak to the young man and let him see that you object to his conduct.

LITTLE THINGS OF INTEREST

AN experiment was made some time ago by a woman, who in order to test the sustaining powers of chocolate lived upon it for sixty days and lost but fifteen pounds in weight during that time.

About 90 per cent. of the tea exported from Asia is consumed by English speaking people.

The only country that does not use the red cross as the emblem of her hospital corps is Turkey, which is allowed to use a red crescent in its place in deference to her soldiers' religious belief.

If the world were birdless, a naturalist declares, man could not inhabit it after nine years' time, in spite of all the sprays and poisons that might be manufactured for the destruction of insects.

About twenty or twenty-five years ago the United States was the principal foreign contributor to the cheese supply of Great Britain, but Canada has since outstripped this country as an exporter of cheese.

Among the curios preserved in the Bank of England is a banknote that passed through the Chicago fire. The paper was consumed, but the ash held together and the printing it quite legible. It is carefully kept under glass.

All birds when perched on trees or bushes serve as weather cocks, as they invariably place themselves with their heads to the wind.

The average amount of sickness in human life is ten days per year.

The air is so pure in the polar regions that throat and lung diseases are unknown there.

The latest novelty in vegetables is a black potato, which has recently been sent to a London seed merchant. It came not inappropriately from the Congo.

OLD FASHIONED REMEDIES

AN old-fashioned remedy for sore throat that is said to be effective is a nutmeg worn on a silk thread around the neck. The hole through the nutmeg is made with a red-hot awl.

A good poultice for chilblains is made by scraping the pulp out of a baked white turnip and mixing it with a tablespoonful of salad oil, one of mustard and one of grated horseradish. Place the mixture on a piece of soft rag and apply.

Another good plan is to wet the flannel with hot water, sprinkle a little turpentine on the side of the poultice to be applied. Cover the flannel, which should be folded in four thicknesses, with oil silk.

For a hot water fomentation a much easier way than wringing cloths out of hot water is to fold the cloth to the required size, put it into a steamer and place over boiling water.

A most effective fomentation is made of dried poppy heads. Take four ounces, break into little bits, remove the seeds and put them into four pints of water and boil for fifteen minutes. Strain and keep the water for use in making the hot fomentation.

In case of earache do not put anything into the ear except by direction of a physician. The best way to relieve earache is to heat an iron or a brick, wrap it in two or three thicknesses of flannel, pour warm water on the top, when steam will at once rise. If the ear is placed close to the flannel the steam will permeate every part of it.

For a dangerous wound made by a rusty nail or a jagged knife, the best remedy is to apply pork rind. It should be changed often for several days, when the poison will be entirely drawn out and there will be no inflammation.

Nothing so quickly compels a good impression as a good complexion.

Sallow, Dingy, Ugly Skin.

NO matter what the cause, no matter what your station in life, it is a simple matter for Woodbury to give you Clear, Healthy, Beautiful Skin—make your Face Bright and Attractive, your health better and your whole life more worth living.

It does not cost anything to call or write and find out just what can be done for your particular skin. Thirty thousand persons were cured last year.

$1000.00 Prize Song, 10c

"Sweet Nellie Wood" is one of the successful songs in the great $1,000.00 prize contest held by the American Music Library. The success of the song in this contest immediately brought the piece to the attention of the versatile actress, Marie Cahill. Miss Cahill was fortunate enough to secure first right to sing the song, which she promptly featured as her "leading" success. Ever since, the permanent success of "Sweet Nellie Wood" has been firmly established. Certainly few songs of sentiment, more simple, sweet and beautiful, have ever been written. To hear the piece is to whistle it—the tune becomes actually contagious and spreads through sheer force of its sweeping lyric value. We are for a few days only going to offer this beautiful little masterpiece of popular song writing for only 10c., provided the dime be sent in within FIVE DAYS from date. (SPECIAL—The above song and any two 50c. pieces below—$1.50 in all—for only 25c.—if you remit at once. HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MAY 24, 1906

Our Financial Oligarchy and Its Government Puppets

Why Continue the Farce of Election? Why Not Turn Over the Government Openly to the Powers That Have Seized It Secretly

The first duty of government—its highest function—IS PROTECTION OF ALL THE PEOPLE.

The government, uniting in itself the power of all, is organized to use that power for the benefit of all; to do those things that cannot be done by the individual or the group of individuals, AND THAT ARE OBVIOUSLY IN THE INTERESTS OF THE ENTIRE COUNTRY.

The recent earthquake in California made the duty of government obvious.

The great Western seaport of the nation was destroyed. The entire country suffered by this destruction. It suffered through its sympathies, its feelings of brotherhood and in material ways through the destruction of a necessary part of the national mechanism.

It would be as much a matter of course for a nation like this to come at once, and most energetically, to the rescue of San Francisco as for an individual with a maimed right hand to hasten in all ways to bring about a cure.

The resolution offered by Senator Newlands provided for government financing of San Francisco's reconstruction. There was no question whatever of CHARITY. California did not ask for charity. It asked simply that the people of the nation, for their own sake and for the national welfare, should be permitted to use their national resources in a perfectly legitimate way.

Senator Newlands's resolution asked that the government lend, at the usual low rate of interest, the money required for the rebuilding of San Francisco, taking as security A MORTGAGE UPON ALL THE PROPERTY WHICH WOULD RESULT FROM THE EXPENDITURE OF GOVERNMENT MONEY.

This was not a resolution to be discussed or QUESTIONED. The opportunity was there for the nation to meet its highest obligation and provide for the welfare of all. The duty of Congress was simple, it was plain; not questioned by any EXCEPT THOSE WHOSE SELFISH INTERESTS DEMANDED THE OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE MONEY OUT OF SAN FRANCISCO'S MISFORTUNE.

The city of San Francisco lay in ruins. The will of the American people was that it should be rebuilt, and that the limitless combined resources of the American nation should promote the rebuilding.

But the power that misrepresents the people, the power guilty of treason to its own government, the shameful and the shameless Senate of the United States, said, "No." It was as though one should say to an individual with a crushed hand, "You shall not spend your money to cure that wound."

Why does the Senate of the United States forbid the people of the United States to lend their credit, WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST RISK WHATEVER, to a city whose misfortune means misfortune and arrested industry for the entire country?

The Senate was guilty of this vile and heartless action BECAUSE THE SENATE IS THE WILLING, PROFIT-SHARING TOOL OF THE FINANCIAL OLIGARCHY WHICH ABSOLUTELY CONTROLS THE NATION.

The government of the United States could be permitted to guarantee THE BONDS OF RAILROADS NOW BUILDING IN THE PHILIPPINES. These railroads, mind you, are not to be owned by THE GOVERNMENT. They are the private speculations of private individuals, INCLUDING ADMINISTRATION FAVORITES AND MANY A SENATOR WHOSE NAME DOESN'T APPEAR IN HIS MONEY-MAKING ENTERPRISES.

The government of the United States is permitted to guarantee the bonds issued by those railroads in the Philippines; the credit of all the people is used to let those speculators have money at the lowest possible rate. But the people's money could NOT be used to rebuild THEIR CITY OF SAN FRANCISCO.

When any railroad pirate of the Huntington type wanted to build a great railroad system—AND USE THE PEOPLE'S MONEY TO BUILD IT—he had no difficulty in getting the government credit behind him. He could borrow his tens of millions. He could get as a free gift his millions of acres of land, KEEP ALL THE PROFITS FOR HIMSELF AND REFUSE EVEN TO PAY WHAT HE OWED THE GOVERNMENT.

But when the entire people demand that this national credit, this united power of reconstruction, shall be extended to a city stricken with a terrible misfortune, THE TRAITOROUS SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES SAYS, "NO."

How long are the people going to tolerate this condition of affairs?

How long are they going to allow themselves to be swindled and mocked and robbed by the financial brigands and Trust highbinders who sit in the United States Senate? How can they look without shame at that gathering of men, including one drivelling idiot from the State of New York and one old man from the same State in his dotage using his feeble voice to protect the selfish interests of his express company, one cunning rascal from New England sitting as the representative of Standard Oil—and rows of others of the same stamp?

Since our government is relinquishing all its functions into the hands of the financial oligarchy that has seized upon power, why keep up the farce of popular government any longer? Why go through the dismal make-believe of elections at stated intervals?

Why not let the directors in the Rockefeller banks and the managers of a few of the Trusts meet and appoint A PRESIDENT TO CARRY OUT ORDERS AND A CONGRESS TO RUN ERRANDS? Why not turn over the National Capitol—or at least one wing of it—to the Stock Exchange and transform the misused committee rooms, where the people are swindled, into boards for the meetings of the various Trust directorships?

Under such a new, frank and at least sincere form of American government we should be recognizing conditions as they are. The Senate, needless to say, would not be changed. It is now as bad as it could be. It does not even pretend to any honesty whatever.

The people should frankly admit the situation, abdicate in favor of those that really rule, or show some interest in their own government, act vigorously and act quickly.

To-day the situation is monstrous. The government is permitted to do only work that offers no temptation of private gain to private monopoly. We call ourselves a republic—a nation ruled by the majority. And we humbly submit when a few scoundrels in the Senate of the United States forbid the people of this country to come to the rescue of San Francisco. Why do they forbid it? BECAUSE THEY DON'T WANT THE STRICKEN INHABITANTS OF CALIFORNIA TO GET MONEY FROM THEIR GOVERNMENT AT THREE PER CENT., THUS KEEPING THE FINANCIAL OLIGARCHY FROM LENDING THE MONEY AT SIX PER CENT., getting it from the government for nothing through its banking system.

THEY PRACTICE ROLLER SKATING ON THE ROOF

Our Popular Song Bureau

By William F. Kirk

This never-to-be-forgotten series, "Lips That Clinch with Ginger Ale Shall Never Clinch with Mine," is worthy of more than passing mention. It was written at the request of a prominent temperance worker, who has noted with alarm the increase of wine tippling among our society leaders. The music is by the celebrated composer, Marie Dressler.

I.

THE swell cafe was crowded with aristocratic folks,
Who sprang their airy persiflage and comic opera jokes.
A slim yet beauteous debutante was sitting in her seat
And sailing through the bill of fare for something to eat.
Her innocent young escort also looked upon the bill
And gazed upon the price marks with a most uneasy thrill.
"Let's have some ginger ale to drink," he whispered to his mate,
Then looking at him haughtily, this statement she did state:

CHORUS:

"A little fizz, the best there is, is good enough for me—
It sends my memory winging back to dear old Tennessee.
Dear Algy, you must loosen up if you wouldst call me thine,
For lips that clinch with ginger ale shall never clinch with mine!"

II.

How little thought that maiden of the havoc she would make!
Before a year had rolled away she seen her sad mistake,
One day she met upon the street a youth in ragged garb,
As useless as a fish-hook that has lost its jagged barb.
Quoth he, "Your fine seal ring, the one I wore upon my thumb,
Is in a pawn shop, Gertie, dear—I let it go for rum!"
The maiden deftly sidestepped and he tottered on his way,
And left her thinking of the words she once to him did say:

CHORUS:

"A little fizz, the best there is, is good enough for me," etc.

Why Faces All Differ

By Susan Fuller

I WONDER more people do not look alike. The face is a small portion of the human anatomy, and every face is made up of the same parts as every other face, yet very seldom is resemblance so strong, even between twins, that one person is not easily distinguishable from another.

Souls are so different that even if features were the same our faces would still be different.

A pure heart and noble mind make one pair of black eyes mild and attractive, while others of the same hue flash with the hasty temper that menaces friendship.

The Roman nose, backed by a haughty spirit, is imperious and aggressive, while the same nose, with a gentler mind, gives only the feeling of protection.

Thin lips sometimes close with an unpleasant firmness, betraying meanness; again they bespeak only refined dignity.

The inner life will come to the surface. Flesh and blood are not transparent, yet the individual character will show itself in the features.

"No man liveth to himself," yet how many people try to hide themselves within themselves, forgetting that the individuality stamps the features, and a good life can make even a homely face radiant with beauty.
